Jammin’ Java in Vienna has become a mini-Mecca for mini music lovers. And there are many, many of them! Jammin’ Java regularly hosts the hottest kids’ musicians in the DC area, and it’s a regular gathering place for mamas, daddies, and their tots. Maybe that’s because Jammin’ Java is owned and operated by three music-loving siblings, two of whom tour naturally as The Brindley Brothers. Jammin’ Java also happens to have great coffee and treats, a nice aesthetic, and a comfortable décor. Their café fare includes excellent dips and sampler plates, gourmet chilis, salads, and sandwiches. As for the sweets, their caramel apple pie is the scrumptious favorite. Jammin’ Java has received glowing reviews from the likes of USA Today, the Washington Post, Washingtonian, and Dirty Linen. Visit their website for a complete calendar of upcoming musical events and children’s performances.
